LESLIE E. KEELEY, MD.,LL.D Founder of the Keeley Cure.

A great deal of temperance work is behind the times. It needs revising. It needs to be brought up-to-date. To be up to date means not only to know what has been discovered about the effect of alcohol, but it means a knowledge of the best ways of coping with it.

The man or woman who still hugs the delusion that inebriety is is nothing else but a vice, to be dealt with as one would deal with other vices, is nailing his faith to an exploded theory. He may have the best of intentions, but he will get small results. Equall mistaken is the man or woman who thinks that everything connected with drunkenness is summed up in the one word, "Disease," and that the only thing required to make a reputable citizen of a person whose bibulous habits are only an accompaniment of a vicious life is to give him the Keeley Cure. In both cases they are limiting their possibilities by failing to look at all sides of the question.

Nothing is gained by dodging unpleasant facts. And there is no place where honesty is more essential than in dealing with the inebriate. It is not enough that he should be shown the evils of strong drink. Perhaps he knows them better than the one who talks to him. and is powerless to overcome them. But the evils that are caused by drink and the evils that existed independent of drink are not invariably reached by the same means.

The Keeley Cure is a medical remedy for a physical disease. It destroys the craving for alcoholic liquor and restores the inebriate to his normal condition of health. But it does not remedy defects of character inherent in his natural make-up. It does the one thing for which it was intended. It cures the disease of inebriety. And a man leaves the Institute in full possession of all his faculties, with his wits sharpened for evil or for good, according as he naturally inclines.

Thousands of good men have become victims of alcohol. Some are men of wealth and prominence, and some have lost their grip on happiness, usefulness and prosperity. In either case it matters little what caused their addiction. Whiskey is the same tyrant in whatever guise it gains its control. But after it does gain control its victims have lost the power to let it alone. The Keeley Cure restores that power. It destroys the diseased craving and gives them a new chance in life. When such men leave the Institute, they are not in need of some one to help them reform. What they need is encouragement in their efforts to pick up the broken threads of their business efforts. They need friends to help them regain their adjustment.

But for those whose tastes are low and depraved, drunkenness is only one feature of a dissolute life. There is need for something beside medicine. The Keeley Cure will not change such a man's character any more than curing him of typhoid fever would have done, and he will very likely drift back to his old associations and in-

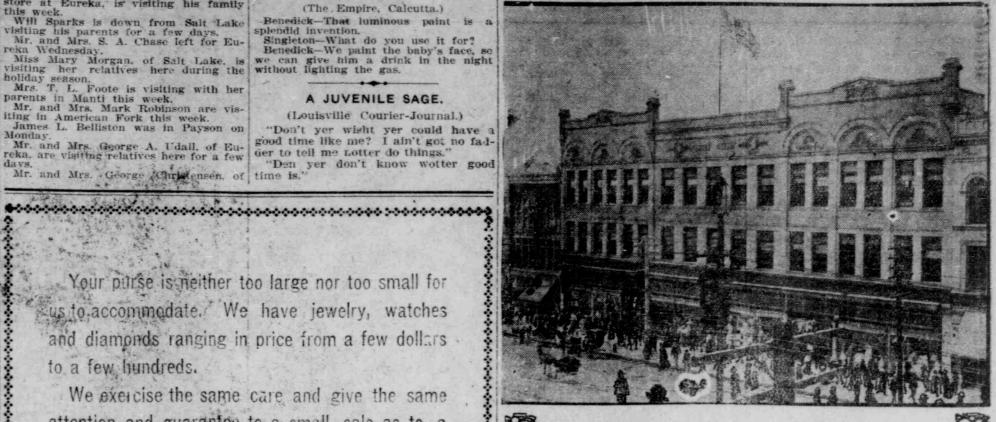

The Keeley Cure does not perform impossibilities. It transforms the drunkard into a sober man with all craving for strong drink removed. But it transforms him into exactly the same kind of a man he was before he drank, just as he would have been cured of any other malady. Medicine cures disease. It does not change personality. And it sometimes happens that there is an excellent field for a reformer after the cure has done its work.

URS is a store for everybody -- a great institution. It is permeated with an atmosphere of style--a characteristic which not only covers the more elaborate merchandise--or garment--but reaches even to the more inexpensive lines we sell. Indeed it is an atmosphere of style-correctness in everything in which style is concerned-and style of necessity, is linked to quality. There is another feature equally important as style and quality--right prices.

Prices touch every home. They mean so much to the man who works for wages -- and the man whose business or profession enforces economy.

We have set the pace in low prices. We are everywhere discussed. When goods and prices are compared, shoppers realize the benefits low prices make possible.

Ours is a store for all people--with prices advantageous to the homes-especially in the homes where housewives must manage carefully.
